So, not only do you benefit from travelling in style, but also feel good about doing so in an environment-friendly way. The vessel is also quieter, so you can sit back and soak up the sights and sounds from the river. Earth Clipper will soon be joined by two further hybrid vessels – Celestial and Mars Clipper – as the business works towards its targets of reducing carbon emissions by 50% by 2030 and net zero by 2040.

Go unlimited with Uber Boat by Thames Clippers and explore Greenwich by river with the East Zone River Roamer. The East Zone River Roamer is the easiest way to connect all of the East and Southeast areas of London along the River Thames between Canary Wharf and Woolwich (Royal Arsenal), including Greenwich and North Greenwich piers. The full network extends from Putney in the west to piers in central London and through to Barking Riverside in the east, plus occasional services to and from the historic Gravesend pier.

The National Maritime Museum will be hosting “Women of RNLI” exhibition from 2 March 2024. The exhibition will celebrate the vital role that women have played in saving lives at sea, highlighting the work and success of women in a variety of roles throughout the RNLI’s 200-year history.

Women of the RNLI will feature a series of 42 photographs by Jack Lowe recently acquired by Royal Museums Greenwich (RMG). The portraits of women that volunteer for the RNLI will be displayed alongside their lifeboat station’s corresponding slipway, putting the landscape that these women operate in at the heart of their stories. The images form part of Lowe’s ongoing Lifeboat Station Project, an attempt to photograph all 238 operational RNLI lifeboat stations and crew members at each.

The hugely popular annual Astronomy Photographer of the Year exhibition is also here to celebrate the very best in astrophotography from around the world, until August 2024.

In the fifteenth year of the competition, there were over 4,000 entries from passionate amateur and dedicated professional photographers, submitted from 64 countries across the globe. The winning and shortlisted images are displayed in at the exhibition, including awe-inspiring scenes of the Milky Way, vibrant star trails racing across the night sky, and amazing auroral activity.

Greenwich Park Revealed Project, 2024–25

The Royal Parks has embarked on the second phase of its Greenwich Park Revealed project to restore Greenwich Park's disappearing 17th century landscape. The project will also create new facilities to service the park's five million annual visitors, including an improved viewing platform by the General Wolfe statue.

Greenwich Park hosts a unique, formal landscape, commissioned by Charles II in the 17th century and designed by French landscape architect André Le Nôtre – best known for designing the world-famous Versailles gardens, outside Paris.

A new, landscaped viewing platform at the famous viewpoint by the General Wolfe Statue will transform the popular area into an accessible, enlarged public space. The platform will be extended to provide a piazza for public enjoyment and cultural events, with a new catering kiosk and room for outdoor seating.

The landscape features of the 'Grand Ascent' – giant, grass steps on Observatory Hill, which lead up to the Royal Observatory – will be expertly redefined and returned to their original splendour.

As well as protecting the park's heritage, the project will expand valuable acid grassland habitats, supporting birds and pollinators, such as ground-nesting bees and wasps. The restored tree avenues will provide a foraging habitat and movement corridors for wildlife.

Work is also underway to create brand new community facilities, including a new café which is due to open this Spring, a volunteer hub, a community garden, and a new learning space in The Wilderness enclosure.

 The charity, which manages London's eight Royal Parks, is funding the project alongside a £4.5m grant from the Parks for People programme joint funded by The National Lottery Heritage Fund and The National Lottery Community Fund.*
